

The Way It Was

By Dave Clark

145 Years Ago: December, 1875

All who are familiar with Ike Lucas, knows that he entertains more or less regard for religion, and that he has leaned toward the Methodist tenets. Whether he concluded that sprinkling was not sufficient to wash his sins away, or whether he thought that if one was good two must be better, we are not certain, but this we do know, that he tried immersion one evening last week, and this is how it happened. Issac had been down in Grundy County canvassing for Hitchcock's analysis of the bible. On his way home Friday evening to spend the holidays he drove into what is commonly a very small stream on the Shell Rock and Butler Center road about five miles south of here, but which had been swollen by the rain on the evening before. The first lunge his horse made he went in over his back, and commenced to flounder. Issac, however, managed to keep him straight until he struck the opposite bank, which the animal could not scale, and fell over on his side, being badly tangled in the harness. At this junction Ike took to the water and managed to change the horse's course downstream, and by making a rudder of himself by hanging onto the hind end of the buggy, steered the whole concern to the shore from which he started, affecting a landing some distance below. He made a detour after being completely baptized, and crossed the rubicon in safety. Upon reaching the river south of town, he met with more obstacles in the shape of ice and water—the river not being fordable. Not having a desire for another immersion, he drove some five miles further to the upper bridge before he could cross, but finally reached home, wet and cold, satisfied he had had enough of the Baptist plan. But seriously, it was a dangerous mishap, and one that he does not care to repeat again soon. Seems like us Methodists are a hardy group or a little foolish for driving into the Creek in the first place. I assume the "upper bridge" he used would be the old wagon bridge west of town, it was a year or two before a south river bridge was built. Note: a "rubicon" is a shallow stream in northern Europe. Seems like the editor, James O. Stewart, was showing off his knowledge a little!

Some low-lived thief stole about half of Mrs. Brandom's clothes off the line Monday night. He deserves hanging.

Capt. Jones sold fifty-four hogs Monday that would pass for a fine lot. The lot averaged 290 pounds—fifty of them averaging 300 pounds each. The fattest part of the transaction was the $1,000 which the captain put down to the credit side of his bank account.

The greatest curiosity we have seen lately was a drove of turkeys which went thru town Sunday morning, being driven like hogs. We do not know now many there were in the drove, buy understand there were about 500. They were being taken to Waverly and were picked up thru the country. Really hard to imagine!

Those who love to take part in the waltz dance will have the opportunity to do so at Boylan's Grove on the 31st; Supper at Hotel De Jones, and dance at Colvin's hall, and it will cost you only the small sum of $2.25. Boylan's Grove once was a small settlement two miles west of Bristow; apparently they had a hotel and dance hall at one time. Google reports that the "mazy dance" was somewhat similar to a modern square dance, but too complicated to explain here. All part of "The Way it Was."

There's a new 10-pound Republican boy furnishing music for Milt Molsberry's family. The youth commenced exercises Tuesday.

A big wolf hunt is planned for Christmas, north of town.

Harvey Waugh will arrive home from Nashville, Tenn., Wednesday, where he has been teaching violin in Fiske University. On Wednesday evening, December 30, he and his sister Elizabeth will broadcast from station W. H. O. Bankers Life, Des Moines, from 7:30 to 8 p.m.

A large Christmas tree in the center of Main street at the intersection of Superior conveys good cheer to all who pass thru town or visit the place. In front of each place and the entire length of Main street small trees about four feet in height also add to the Christmas spirit.

I recently had a picture of all these trees on Facebook, with no idea of a date, so this narrows that down.

This column was written Dec. 29.

I'm going to stay up late this New Year's Eve—not to ring in the New Year, but to make sure this one leaves.

What is a New Year's resolution? Something that goes in one year and out the other.

WHC names award winners

Four members of the Waverly Health Center (WHC) team have been named November/December Spotlight on Values award winners. Nominated by co-workers, patients and members of the community, these individuals are examples of WHC's values in action.

Shirley Kammeyer of Fredericksburg, medical-surgical, was recognized for the value of Compassion. Shirley's actions were acknowledged in a letter from a family who had a loved one on hospice during their time at WHC. Her nominator stated, "I was with Shirley when she wrote this kind note and her compassion and thoughtfulness stood out to me, and it clearly stood out to this family! It left a positive lasting impression on one of the most difficult days in their lives."

Amy Homeister of Allison, environmental services, was recognized for the value of Excellence. Her nominator commented, "Amy deserves this award for excellence in her job and for her enthusiasm! Amy comes to work each day with a smile on her face. She is the first to lend a helping hand when the need arises. Amy ensures the medical-surgical unit is clean and organized, making our area welcoming to our patients and their families."

Christie Poppe of Plainfield, health & safety, was recognized for the value of Innovation. Her nominator wrote,

"During the COVID-19 pandemic, Christie has helped our facility cope with the challenges that have arisen. Christie has been an important team member as decisions were made during COVID. She has consistently used the regulations to create processes that not only protect staff and patients but also are realistic in these challenging times. Christie has been an asset to all areas of the hospital and is a pleasure to work with."

Teresa Isaacson, ARNP of Denver, Christophel Clinic, received WHC's Quarterly Provider Spotlight on Values Award. Her nominator wrote, "I was a new patient for Teresa and was so impressed with her compassion. She and her nurse Janelle work so well together - I felt that they were both there for me and I was not just an "appointment." I was at the clinic for a routine physical, but also wanted to address a few specific issues and concerns. Teresa took time to listen to each concern and offered options on how to deal with them."

WHC has adopted six values which include compassion, enthusiasm, excellence, innovation, integrity and leadership. The Spotlight on Values program recognizes WHC employees, volunteers and physicians for demonstrating these values. Patients, visitors and employees are encouraged to submit nominations for the WHC Spotlight on Values honors. Nominations can be submitted online at WaverlyHealthCenter.org/ThankYou or at any Spotlight on Values ballot boxes placed throughout the health center.

Did YOU know?

BY MARY DEWITT
info@theclarksvillestar.com

Many of you will be grossed out by my subject this week: spiders. Arachnophobia (fear of spiders) is a very common fear among us humans. Some of the following facts may just help contribute to that feeling.

Spiders are not insects. They are arachnids. They differ from insects in having only two parts to the body, eight legs not six, six or eight eyes (two in insects) and spinnerets on their abdomens that produce silk.

There are approximately 38,000 known species of spiders worldwide, 3000 of which live in North America. Scientists believe there are probably many more to be discovered.

They are found on every continent except Antarctica.

Spiders are vital to a healthy ecosystem. They eat harmful insects, pollinate plants, and recycle dead animals and plants back into the earth. They are also a valuable food source for many small mammals, birds, and fish.

All spiders spin silk, but not all spiders spin webs. Spider silk, which is actually a liquid that hardens when it hits the air, is super strong. A single strand is said to be five times stronger than a strand of steel of the same thickness.

Many female spiders are known to eat their mate, whether it be before, during or after copulating. They don't call her black widow for nothing!

Have you ever wondered why a spider's legs curl up when they die? There's a reason for that! Spiders can only pull the muscles in their legs inward, not outward. In the event their legs begin to curl in, spiders are able to pump a watery liquid through their legs to push them back out again. So when a spider dies, it can't push the fluid through its legs, therefore its legs continue to stay curled up.

Spider blood is blue. Unlike human blood, the oxygen in spider blood binds to copper, making their blood blue. The oxygen in human blood, on the other hand, binds to iron, which makes our blood red.

Spiders are nearsighted.

Whether a spider can run up walls depends upon its feet. Garden spiders, for example, have legs that end in claws, so they can't grip a wall, but house spiders can because their feet are covered in tiny hairs that can hold onto a surface so long as it isn't too slick like a bathtub.

The tiniest spider is the Patu marplesi, which is so small that it can fit on the end of a pencil.

The biggest species of spider is the goliath bird-eater, which can be up to 11 inches wide. Ewww!

Tarantulas can shoot barbed hair to deter attackers. This hair is especially dangerous when shot into the eyes.

This might freak you out, but research suggests that you are never more than 10 feet away from a spider. Hopefully not the goliath birdeater!

Christmas cheer

2020 has definitely been a different year, impacting people's physical and emotional health, their livelihood, and almost every aspect of life. Despite the challenges it brought, it has been a time of reflection and a time to slow down and contemplate what really is important in life. I am proud to say that the people who live in, work in, and serve Butler County took the challenges of 2020 and rose above them to be more generous than ever. Butler County Visions of Well-Being, the non-profit group of helping agencies, that sponsors Christmas Cheer was overwhelmed by the generosity shown through the donations received to help Butler County households in need during the holidays. To date, we have received $16,160 in local donations and $3820 in grant funding from the Community Foundation of Northeast Iowa. Thank you to each and every person, family, group/organization, and business that contributed to Christmas Cheer, and special thanks to the Community Foundation of Northeast Iowa for their grant funding. Those funds were used to purchase Butler Bucks that were delivered to the households in need. One hundred sixty-three households were served, impacting 264 adults and 200 children. Recipients were extremely thankful for the support they received, which will help to make their holidays a little brighter, amidst the challenges they face. Best wishes for health and happiness to all in 2021 from each and every member of Butler County Visions of Well-Being!

Kuehner will continue to serve the law firm's clients, which includes Butler County.

As County Attorney, one of Kuehner's primary functions will be prosecuting the county's criminal cases. Kuehner has plenty of experience in criminal court, having worked as both prosecutor and defense attorney at one point or another during his career.

"I think being a defense attorney gives you a better understanding of how the system works and how people charged with crimes think," said Kuehner. "You can use that to reach resolutions with cases much easier."

Kuehner will also handle the county's juvenile court cases and offer legal advice on other matters when elected officials run into an issue.

"We're the first person they go to for advice on these matters," said Kuehner.

Growing up in nearby Readlyn, Kuehner is happy to be in the "big city" of Parkersburg to service the rural area.

Kuehner doesn't expect much will change as he takes over as County Attorney, but he does hope that some of the adaptations the court system has made during the COVID-19 pandemic stick around even once the pandemic has passed, particularly in regard to video conferencing as arranging in-person meetings when judges and attorneys working in multiple counties can lead to long delays in getting cases through the court system.

"I think this pandemic has been an excellent opportunity for people to learn that just because you're not physically present doesn't mean work can't still be done in the court system," said Kuehner. "I kind of view it as a good way to make permanent changes on the things that we've been forced to do."
